It is also crucial for an understanding of liberalism as it developed in Europe at the turn of the nineteenth century. Everything towards which man directs his attention, whether it is limited to the direct or indirect satisfaction of his merely physical wants, or to the accomplishment of external objects in general, presents itself in a closely interwoven relation with his internal sensations. Instead of men grouping themselves into communities in order to discipline and develop their powers, even though, [22] to secure these benefits, they should forego a portion of their exclusive possessions and enjoyments; it is only by the actual sacrifice of those powers that they dem Prinzip und dem Einen (German Edition) purchase in this case the privileges resulting from association.
